

Paris

Edition 1

Ce n'est pas vrai! Our latest guide to Paris has shrunk! But small is beautiful and it's now the third in our hugely popular series of mini guides – a jewel box of a book. Peek inside and discover not just hotels as in previous editions but apartments, townhouses, B&Bs and even restored farmhouses on the edge of the city. Allez!

- Do your own thing and self-cater. A little gem of a 1920s' studio in Montmartre can be yours for the week.
- Who said Paris is expensive? They were right but it is still possible to stay somewhere cheap and chic – many have rooms for under €100 a night.
- If you fancy a bit of something fancier, there are some gorgeous rooms for sophisticats – canopied beds, cocktail bars with tinkling pianos, private tours and views of that tower.
- Just 20 minutes by train from the heart of Paris and a different world – B&B in style at a 19th-century mansion in an elegant, leafy suburb.

- Publication date: 3 September 2009

Interesting Stuff

- 115 entries covering self-catering apartments, B&Bs and hotels
- Making the most of Paris is a handy little section by the editor, Susan Luraschi – find out how best to get about and where to go. A long-term Paris resident – what Susan doesn't know, isn't worth knowing
- Montmartre or Marais? Left Bank or Right? Pinpoint your ideal hotel using the comprehensive map section

Bonne Nuit Paris

Absolute Paris, 300 years old but not grand, beams galore and modern comforts, independent rooms and a warm family welcome, little streets, friendly markets: this is real privilege. Charming, intelligent Jean-Luc serves his own honey, Denise's jams and fresh baguette in their generous, rambling living room. Guest rooms are on the floor below. Each has a fun-lovingly colourful shower room, a lot of quirk (the last word in creative basins) and an appealing mix of old woodwork and contemporary prints. Simplicity, panache and personality, real attention and service are the hallmarks: you will feel well cared for.

Price €150. Extra person €75.
